Trust

Stoop-shouldered,
foot-dragging,
sighing,
resignation,
..... is not trust

Real trust

- bounces on eager toes of anticipation;
- laughs with pure delight of knowing in whom it believes;
- rests easy, knowing on whom it waits.

Lord, so wrap me in the knowledge of you that my trust is no longer in You but – is You

Children are cutest when no one's watching – or they think no one is. I had just stepped into the kitchen with an armload of wash when the sight of our boys standing together on the back step caught my eye. Their backs were turned, so they didn't see me looking, as the little one wrapped his arm around his brother's knees and tilted his blond head back, gazing up. He barely reached his brother's belt loops.

In a tiny voice he said, "Bend your ear down a minute – I want to tell you a secret."
Then, very quietly, he whispered something that delighted them both.

You know, Jesus, I can't help thinking as I watch them....after all these years of walking with you, I still don't even stretch to your knees. 'Bend your ear down a minute, I want to tell you a secret

'I think you are wonderful. And I really do trust you. When I grow up I want to be just like you.'
