The theme of this edition is 'Communication', and some of the 21st century means of communicating and searching for information are:

- @ texting via mobile phones,
- @ email
- @ the world wide web.

Gone are the days of pen and ink – yes, the 'scratchy pens' with the inkwells on your school desk! Nowadays you need to have nimble fingers, not for writing longhand in your best handwriting, keeping within the lines! but for texting and typing (not on a typewriter either, but on a keyboard).

As a retired Young People's Librarian, I had to accept, in the latter years of my career, that children were no longer using libraries to find out information for their school projects. It could all done at home on the Internet. And yes, I do use it myself instead of looking up an encyclopaedia!

However, you can also be 'led up many garden paths' if you choose the wrong websites, though that can be interesting!!

We need to move forward and keep up with the times! - there are many wonderful websites. There are those which can help you keep in touch with what's going on in your own local area, and in particular, your own church and local presbytery.

If you have a computer, please look at our own church website:

www.polmontold.org.uk/

where this magazine, and many of the back numbers, can be read in full colour. You can:

- @ read about the history of the church here in Polmont,
- @ find out about the work of all our groups and organisations,
- @ you can also read about the recent events in the church.

And did you know that you can:

- @ see the order of service before you come to church on a Sunday morning?

And there is so much more. The big problem with a website like ours is keeping it up-to-date! – almost a full-time job in itself! Our thanks to our wonderful web master, Iain Morrison – we couldn't do without him.
